The developers of the “Posture Reminder” app (from here on referred to as the “app”) do not collect any data that might directly identify a user (of which collection is under their control) without the user’s knowledge or their explicit consent.

The only data that might identify a user is willingly provided by the user when submitting the Contact form inside the app by either specifying it in the Message that is sent to the app developers or by filling in the optional email field. This willingly provided data will only be used to contact the user if needed.

The app might send anonymous usage data to help with improving the app.

We recommend consulting this document periodically to review any changes that might occur.

Last updated 24th of October 2020